

Twisted Fate of Life by Oishani Chakraborty 7H

A God called Zeus loved and tricked many women openly
And his wife Hera loathed this.
So Zeus appointed a nymph who sidetracked her vocally.
A son was brought to a prophet to Teiresias and he said:

“The son, Narcissus, would live long until he knows himself.”
Meanwhile Hera gets angry— cursed Echo the nymph.
By stealing the last words of others’ speech for herself.
Echo fell in love with Narcissus.

She fell in love with Narcissus.
She fell in love with Narcissus.
She fell in love with Narcissus.

It’s a twisted fate of life.
It’s a twisted fate of life.
All the dreadfulness and horrid-ness will one day be repaid!

Narcissus rejected her – told her she was a wretched fairy.
She cried and got bony.
Her fragile body got frail and she was trapped inside caves.
Narcissus fell in love with his reflection.

This was when he knew himself.
And his soul was sucked from his body.
Leaving only a lily on the lake looking at itself.
In its own reflection.

It’s looking at his own reflection.
It’s looking at its own reflection.
It’s looking at its own reflection.

It’s a twisted fate of life.
It’s a twisted fate of life.
All the dreadfulness and the horrid- ness will one day be repaid!

Oishani Chakraborty 7H